SECRET INGREDIENT

"..Black Garlic.." is made when heads of garlic are aged under specialized conditions of heat and humidity. Bulbs are kept in a humidity-controlled environment at temperatures that range from 140 to 170 °F for 60 to 90 days. There are no additives, preservatives, or burning of any kind. The enzymes that give fresh garlic its sharpness break down. The chemical process that produces new flavour compounds responsible for the deep taste of seared meat and fried onions, earthy, umami-packed flavor that's more mellow than raw or cooked garlic.

In Korea, Black Garlic was developed as a health product and it is still perceived as such. It is sometimes added to energy drinks and in Asia is claimed to increase the consumer's longevity.
